1. The Heinkel Works at Warnemünde, which is repairing planes, employs approximately 500 people. The hangars and runways of the airfield attached to the works are being repaired.

2. The Arado Aircraft Works at Brandenburg a.d. Havel (Z23), which were almost completely destroyed, are at present being hastily reconstructed under the supervision of Soviet military personnel. The manufacturing equipment, power plants, and heating installations are being repaired or newly installed. Machinery has begun to arrive by rail and road, and large quantities of coal have arrived and are still arriving.

3. For a long time after the end of the war, the production of parachutes at Reichenbach (K23) in Vogtland was at a standstill. Work is now, however, once more in full swing. Material is being supplied by the Soviets and the workers are treated well.
